9. (currently amended) A roofing debris collection cart for collecting debris dropped from the roof of a building comprising:

an open top container formed generally in the shape of an inverted, truncated pyramid having its lower, smaller base closed and its upper, larger base open and having end walls joined to inner and outer walls which are sloped, relative to the vertical, at pre-determined angles;

a horizontally arranged support frame located beneath and secured to the smaller base for supporting the container; and support wheels rotateably connected to, and depending beneath, the frame for engagement with the ground upon which the cart is supported; said cart being adapted for positioning adjacent, but spaced from, a wall of a building for arranging a large panel between the container and the wall and leaning at an angle to the wall; and with the angle of the inner wall of the container being substantially similar to an angle of the leaning panel so that the panel is adapted to be arranged close to the container for directing debris dropped down upon the panel into the container; and the inner wall having an upper portion with a channel forming socket on the said upper portion for receiving the lower edge of the panel which is leaned against the house wall;

and including a pair of spaced apart elongated strips secured to the upper portion of the inner wall to form the channel therebetween for receiving the lower edge of said panel.
